

Beauty Day Tour in Vancouver

Gaelle Mouster

Les Nouvelles Esthetiques

July/August 2005

Miraj Hammam Spa

It is in an Arabian Night's palace that I ended my day in Vancouver. The Miraj Hammam is a universe of sensational odours and voluptuousness. It made me feel like a princess. Upon my arrival, I was submerged in an enchanted decor where warm fabrics and golden ornamentation blend wonderfully. We can take advantage of the Hammam, traditional steam bath used since the 14th century in the Middle East. Owner, Surinder Bains Kassour, opened his spa in 2001 and has since then acquired a great reputation in Vancouver. I received an oriental massage which was quite original and marvellously relaxing. It is practised with the hands as well as the forearms by the massage therapist.

The oriental music contributes to this calming experience. After the care session, the clients relax on large mattresses sipping a tea of course, a pure delight!